

Towards Sustainable Built Environment

The REHVA HVAC World Congress CLIMA is the leading international scientific congress in the field of heating, ventilation, and air conditioning (HVAC). Theme of the 16th REHVA HVAC World Congress in Finland is “Zero-Emission and Energy Flexible Buildings for a Sustainable Built Environment”, a topic that highlights the fundamental importance of the HVAC sector in all its aspects. In this perspective, CLIMA 2028 will offer professionals, academics, and companies in the HVAC sector unique opportunity for international discussion about these very timely challenges. It brings together professionals and researchers to share the latest scientific knowledge, discuss current challenges in the field, and find solutions – all aiming for a more sustainable, healthier, and energy-efficient built environment.
